That Coronado Memorial

The Roswell Register-Tribune says it is not in favor of commemorating the explorations of Don Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, the Spanish explorer, as will be done during the territorial fair to be held in this city. That paper has the nerve to publish the following: "The Register-Tribune is not deeply impressed with the Coronado commemorative convention to be held at Albuquerque during the county fair the first week in October. We fall to see where the territory owes anything in particular to Don Coronado. It would be far more sensible to devote the celebration to the consideration of irrigation and the laudation of the man who first planted apples commercially. The glorification of the present and immediate past were distinctly more rational than the beatification of an exploring free-booter of several centuries ago." Now The Citizen doesn't intend to go into the history of Coronado, but it has a few things to say in his favor. If Coronado and a few more fearless gentlemen from old Spain had not braved desert, Indian, heat and cold to explore and settle this portion of the map, the man "who first planted apple seeds" as the Tribune says, would undoubtedly not have planted those seeds. Moreover the indications are from the ancient apple trees at Manzano (apple), Torrance county, that Coronado or some of his compadres did plant the first apple seeds in this territory.

The Tribune has the right idea in desiring not to forget the farmers who now are making the second great reclamation of New Mexico by means of agriculture, but when the Tribune undertakes to refer to one of those old Spanish explorers in a rather shady manner, The Citizen is prepared to pull hair.

The Spanish explorers were on the American continent and knew more about the southwest than some people do now, at least one hundred years or more before the first settlement on the eastern coast.

The people of Spain may not now be as progressive as were the old conquistadores but that is no reason for belittling the bravery and hardihood of Coronado and his men.

Another thing, while we are discussing the subject, the southwest has abundant monuments to show the kind of people that Spain sent to the southwest centuries ago.

Coronado may have been a freebooter, but The Citizen is inclined to think that his record will bear comparison with a whole lot of explorers, whose names take up much more space in some of our biased histories.

Celebrate Coronado's memorial day certainly; it's the proper thing to do. The man with the hoe is all right—one of our best assets, but remember that the man with the hoe and the apple seed was not prowling around this section in very large numbers at the time Coronado fought his way with a handful of men clear across "The Great American Desert."

The Register-Tribune is generally right on most things, but this is an exception to the rule and The Citizen wants to see the Tribune on the right side.

New Mexico has no reason to be ashamed of the men who explored and civilized this territory.

The Tucson Citizen is not wasting much sympathy on the poor Moors who are being slaughtered at the rate of two a day or thereabouts by the French soldiers. The Tucson Citizen should remember that four French soldiers were actually wounded and one Moor killed in the last desperate battle at Casa Blanca and all this in the short space of one afternoon. The following from the paper above named is inexcusable: "Reports of the battles taking place around Casa Blanca recall the vivid stories of newspaper correspondents of the terrible destruction wrought about the Cuban coast by American warships during the Spanish War. Sensitive and humane persons safe in the snug comfort of home used to shudder at the awful carnage taking place among the poor Spaniards, and discourse pityingly of the dreadful effectiveness of modern artillery fire. Not a man-jack of us but would have taken an affidavit that the fair Isle of Cuba was shot to pieces and its beauties laid as waste as the back area of a New York tenement. And when it was all over and everybody went ashore and took shock of the damage, the casualties numbered one decrepit mule, and the destruction of property and fortified places totaled up one flagpole on Moro Castle. It's dollars to doughnuts that the French rifles and big guns haven't made as many weeping widows in Morocco as the cable suggests."

The new contract for advertising Bull Durham tobacco is looked upon as a great victory for newspapers over billboards. Five or six years ago this advertising occupied considerable space in newspapers, but it seemingly did not pull well enough to suit the head of the American Tobacco company, James B. Duke. It was gradually withdrawn and billboards were largely used. It is said that the billboard advertising of Bull Durham and Duke's Mixture in 1902 cost $1,250,000. For five years not a dollar was spent on advertising these brands in newspapers, but agents and publishers have worked untiringly to get the business back into dailies and weeklies. Large copies are going out and it is estimated that if the results come up to expectations, the expenditure for advertising Bull Durham and Duke's Mixture will be close to $2,000,000 in the next year.

The Roswell Record continues to "restore harmony" in the following manner, which is to laugh: "The legal side of our mind tells us that Attorney General Fall's contention in the land fraud cases will be upheld by the court—that the cases will be dismissed on the question of jurisdiction. The national administration will have demonstrated its good intentions, and the matter will be turned over to the territorial officials, who will do nothing. So ends the second chapter of the gospel according to the great "Square Dealer."

Albuquerque will have no trouble in entertaining the Irrigation Congress which will hold its next session here, and the advantages to this city of being able to secure and entertain such an organization will come in the shape of A-1 advertising. The Irrigation Congress will not only benefit this city but New Mexico generally, and our delegates deserve a big hearty slap on the back for work well done.

The Socorro Chieftain says The Citizen is boosting the Socorro fair. The Citizen is boosting the Socorro county fair—in fact, The Citizen is boosting every old fair that is of any benefit to the territory of New Mexico or any town or section. Incidentally, The Citizen is boosting for the territorial fair, which will rival anything of the sort ever held in Albuquerque.

Abe Hummel is so broken down that he is unable to do even light work in the prison garden, and Harry Thaw has had a year and three months in jail in which to regret the heavy work he performed in a garden one night. It's hard—this way of the transgressor.

The government has at last sent experts to investigate the loco weed. Can it be possible that Washington is under the impression that the late reformers were looted? Possibly the eradication of the loco weed will solve the mystery.

If France, in connection with her present Moroccan difficulty, will read up on the history of "excommunications," she will find that Uncle Sam sent one to the Philippines more than nine years ago, and it has not returned yet.

Governor Hoch, of Kansas, the latest hero in public life, cut his hands rescuing women and children from a derailed railway coach. It is Mr. Fairbanks' turn next—or is it Taft's?

Gentlemen who persuade their wives to divorce them that they may marry their "affinities" may be long on "artistic temperament," but they are painfully short on common decency.

Former Governor Taylor, not having that sublime faith in the immunity bath reposed by certain railroads and trusts, declines to return to Kentucky and take a chance on going to jail.

The El Paso Times is looking for a handsome man in El Paso. How about the needle in the haystack?

J. E. Sheridan, territorial coal mine inspector, passed through the city yesterday morning accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mr. Sheridan was en route from his home at Silver City and Mrs. Sheridan and daughter are en route to California on a pleasure trip.

The two negroes arrested Saturday evening for breaking into the residence of J. A. Weinmann will not be tried before tomorrow morning, but did not come up for trial today because of this being the Jewish new year. Mr. Weinmann, the complaining witness against the men, is observing the rites of his church today.

Through the offices of S. B. Grimshaw, general passenger agent for the Santa Fe Central, the Santa Fe will stop trains Nos. 1 and 7 and 8 and 9 at Kenilworth fair grounds. This will be of considerable accommodation to people from the Estancia valley coming to the fair. At present only trains Nos. 1 and 9 stop at Kenilworth.

The fair officials are daily receiving many letters from stock raisers and ranchers in regard to entering stock and produce for exhibition at the fair. Mr. Dillon, of Pueblo, has signified his intention of bringing two car loads of fancy horses here for exhibition. Everything points toward a successful stock and agricultural exhibition at the fair.

Central avenue is dead today as the result of the large number of stores being closed in honor of the Jewish new year, which commenced at sundown yesterday. The crowd at Trac-tion park yesterday was the largest baseball gathering since he has had change of the street car lines. Over a thousand people attended the game. Over 4,000 passengers were carried on the street car lines yesterday.

Every member of the New Mexico Traveling Men's association and any visiting member that is in the city tomorrow is invited to attend a meeting to be held over Zeigler's cafe tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The program for Traveling Men's day at the territorial fair will be business of the meeting, and it is especially important that all commit-teemen are present.

According to M. O. Chabourne, manager of the Albuquerque Traction company, the crowd at Trac-tion park yesterday was the largest baseball gathering since he has had change of the street car lines. Over a thousand people attended the game. Over 4,000 passengers were carried on the street car lines yesterday.

At the Casino. The theatergoers of Albuquerque will be surprised and somewhat pleased to hear that the management of the Casino has arranged to have a popular little drama, featuring college life, called "The Night After" at the Casino next Friday night. The play is new and unique and has made somewhat of a hit in the east. It is a comedy and is expected to draw a great victory. This will be changed to a local setting by the students of the University of New Mexico.

day and this was one of the biggest days' business of the year, thus far, being exceeded only by San Felipe day when over 7,000 people were carried and the Fourth of July when about 10,000 fares were registered.

The officers of the Congregational church have arranged with the Midland Lyceum Bureau for the following attractions for the coming winter: The Garber-Hove entertainers, October 14; the Midland Lyceum Jubilee Singers and Male Quartet, November 1; J. L. Zwick, the artist lecturer, November 26; Wilbur Starr, baritone, and his concert troupe, December 19, and Hon. J. G. Camp, the Orator of the South, January 22.

The opening of the night school at the Albuquerque Business college in the library building, which occurred last Wednesday evening, was very satisfactory to the management. This is a class of educational work that should be encouraged by all thinking people. It furnishes a place, where the young men and women who are working in the day time, can qualify themselves for better positions in life. The management is conducting a high grade school of English branches, shorthand and typewriting, commercial and Spanish.

Santiago Saki, a full-blooded Indian, was arraigned before Police Judge Craig in court this morning on the charge of drunkenness and fighting. He was fined $15. Last evening Saki, while in a pugnacious mood as the result of imbibing too liberal portions of bad whiskey, entered the home of his friend, Fred Arkie, 723 East street at 6 o'clock and proceeded to belay Arkie, who had brought a broom handle. No reason other than drunkenness was given as the cause of the assault. An officer was summoned and Saki was locked up overnight. Saki said he got the liquor at the Red Light saloon on Third street.

SUGAR BEET INDUSTRY FOR RIO GRANDE VALLEY

Emil Kleinwort, the north Third street butcher, has discovered a new occupation for the farmers of the Rio Grande valley.

Early in the spring, Mr. Kleinwort, who owns some bottom land north of the city, planted ten pounds of sugar beet seed as an experiment. A few days ago he pulled a few roots of his crop. Some of the beets weighed nine pounds and are very solid and firm. Some of the beet meat is now being analyzed to see what per cent of sugar it carries. If the beets carry a good percentage of sugar, beet sugar growing may become an industry in the valley.

MAY TAKE THEM TO ARIZONA FOR TRIAL

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 9.—If the charges made against the three Mexican revolutionaries, recently arrested in Los Angeles, are not sufficient to warrant their being taken to Mexico for trial, Mexican Consul Arturo M. Elias of Tucson will take steps to have them re-arrested and brought to Arizona.

Of the three men now held in Los Angeles, one was with the St. Louis jury, from which all the operations of agitators were directed, the Douglas branch being constantly in communication with the St. Louis jury leaders.

On the ground that they directed the Douglas revolutionaries, one of whom is now serving a sentence in the territorial prison at Yuma, Mexican Consul Elias believes that they can be made to answer in this territory.
